A Strong Picture of the Ruler of

Germany. A MAN WHO IS EVERY INCH A KING.

[Translation from the Paris Figaro, in New York An audience of the Emperor, in his cabinet on the ground floor of the Palace, at Berlin, resembles no other royal audience, eyes of the astonished miner another ledge The Emperor is clad in his long military frock-coat, with its two rows of buttons. He is marvellously neat, very straight, and rather stiff. One understands, in looking at him, that expression, "Un soldat sous le har- of men was immediately put to work on nais." His contour is still well preserved. His body is well made. His limbs are powerful. His extremities indicate an old and good race. His face more grave than severe, with its beard cut in German fashion, is well known. The smile which plays on his face is at times very young. When this tall old man speaks to the women who, during the summer months, form his court at Ems, he seems to date back to the seventeenth century. The Emperor has the beautiful blue eyes of Frederick the Great. But. however large his eyes, they have not the extraordinary dimensions of the eves of Frederick. The scant bairs, formerly light brown, to-day ashen, are parted low on the left, crossing, but not covering, the crown of his head. William seems to me to personify absolutely the type of an Emperor of the olden timelarge, strong, handsome-a soldier. The faces of Alexander and of Francis Joseph are those of modern Emperors. The gaze of William has a strange slowness. It is the look of a man who has the consciousness of majesty. He believes, it is well must have been raised to this kind of labor. known, in his divine right. His tuited eyebrows form a tine arch. His eyes have not the vague mysteriousnes of those of Alexander, nor the indicible melancholy of those of Francis Joseph, nor the trouble of those of Queen Victoria. The above information is the last that Doc's" friends have had of him until day before yesterday. Mr. Wilkinson had been sinking the incline on the ledge, taking out the quartz as he went down, but leaving the foot wall so as to avoid having much cab or waste rock when he came to have a crushing. The quartz showed some free gold, but not being a very thick ledge the "Doc" concluded to sink down to water level before taking his rock to mill. He had gone down on the incline about sixty feet, and while putting in a set of timbers a large chunk of the foot wall fell out, disclosing to the behind the supposed foot wall, which was filled with gold. Of course, further sinking was abandoned and attention directed to the new discovery. A force the newly-discovered bonanza. Up to Wednesday morning $20,000 worth had been raised to the surface, as was estimated by competent disinterested judges. In order to convice himself whether the rich ledge he had struck was only a pocket or not, Mr. Wilkinson went back up the incline a distance of forty feet, and in half a dozen places where the cab was picked away from between the timbers the same marvellously rich rock presented itself. Some of the few who have been permitted to go down into the incline say that over $100,000 is already assured to the fortunate owners.

Love's Blindness. Now do I know that Love is blind, for I
Can see no beauty on this beauteous earth;
No life, no light, no hopefulness, no mirth.
Pleasure nor purpose, when thou art not nigh.
Thy absence exiles sunshine from the sky,
Seres spring's maturity, checks summer's birth.
Leaves linnet's pipe as sad as plover's cry.
And makes me in abundance find but dearth.
But when thy feet flutter the dark, and thou
With orient eyes dawnest on my distress, Vith orient eyes dawnest on my distress, Suddenly sings a bird on every bough.
